NEGOTIATE LOANS ON REAL ESTATE

Clarke county lies at the head of the noted Shenandoah Valley. Jefferson county, West Virginia, is its northern boundary; the Blue Ridge Mountain forms its eastern boundary. Frederick on the west. The Shenandoah river flows through the eastern part of the county, and at the foot of the Blue Ridge. In aggregate agricultural wealth, Clarke county is probably the richest county in the State. The exhaustless fertility of her soil, the healthfulness of her climate, and the beauty of her diversified landscape, are subjects that challenge the tongue and admiration of all who have ever visited this county. The surface of the main body of the county is gently undulating—just sufficiently for drainage. The soil is limestone and peculiarly adapted to the growth of wheat and corn, clover and timothy. Blue grass is indigenous, and some farms on uncultivated fields are equal to the far-famed in Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York markets, and many fine horses sold to city buyers.

Good roads traverse the county in every direction, and four macadamized turnpikes center at Berryville, the county seat, which contains a population of about 1000. Pure mountain water from the top of the Blue Ridge is piped into the town by the gravity system, and the town is lighted by Acetylene gas. There are eight churches in the town, and good private and public schools—school houses supported by county and state being located at convenient points all over the county. Taxation at a cash valuation of property is about $1 on the $100 for all purposes—State, county, schools and roads.

The Shenandoah Valley division of the Norfolk and Western Railroad extends through the center of the county, affording ready means of travel or shipments of products either north or south. Besides this railroad, the Southern Railroad from Washington and Alexandria with termini at Blounton, eight miles from Berryville, runs 3 trains daily from Blounton, which will cross the county from east to west, placing us within 60 miles of the Potomac.

For reasons best known to owners I do not advertise many of the most desirable properties I have for sale, but if parties desiring to buy will send me a description of the kind they desire, I will send them a list of properties for sale, or if they desire to see the property, I will send them a list of properties for sale, or if they desire to see the property, I will send them a list of properties for sale.

To Land Buyers.

I request, as a matter of courtesy, that after I have introduced you to the owner of real estate through my advertisement or otherwise, and you have determined to purchase, that you will close the contract through me, so that my commission will be secured.

STORY OF THE FLOOD

THERE ARE MANY AND VARIED VERSIONS OF THE DELUGE.

The Great Event is Chronicled Not Only in the Talmud and Koran, but in the Legends of Almost Every Race That Ever Lived on Earth.

One of the most powerful and vivid descriptive portions of the book of Genesis is that devoted to the wonderful story of the deluge. Together with the accounts of Adam's fall, the slaying of Abel and the turning of Lot's wife into a pillar of salt, every one remembers the story of how Noah was warned of the doom impending over the children of men and how he constructed a huge ark in which he did live, himself and his family and two of every beast of the field and fowl of the air, for the space of 100 days, or until the waters subsided and the dry land appeared. But the Biblical record of this terrible visitation of divine wrath is by no means the only one. In fact, the most skeptically inclined must believe that something of the sort actually occurred long ago, for it has been recorded not only in the Talmud and Koran, but in the legends of almost every nation and race that ever lived on the face of the earth, including the Chinese, the ancient Aztecs of Mexico, the Indian tribes of North and South America and even the savages of Africa.

The story, of course, varies materially in the multitudinous traditions, but the gist of it remains substantially the same—namely, that the earth was once visited by a great flood in which nearly every living thing was overwhelmed and lost. Thus in the Koran we read that Noah constructed the ark with divine assistance and was called out by his pains by the wicked. When the time prescribed for the punishment of mankind arrived, water was seen to flow from the burning oven of Noah's wife, and immediately all the veins and arteries of the earth broke and spouted out water.

Noah was then admonished in these words: "Take and bring into the ark two couples of every kind of animal, male and female, with all your family, except him who has been condemned by your mouth, and receive the faithful and even the unbelieving, but few only will enter." The Koran also says that the ark was built in two years and that it contained three stories, the upper one for the birds, the middle one for the men and the provisions and the hold for the beasts. Canaan, the son of Ham, refused to be saved. Therefore Noah, cursed him, and his posterity became black and were enslaved. The Persians assert that Ham incurred his father's malediction as well. When six months had passed the ark rested on the top of Mount Djondj (Ararat), after having made the circuit of the world. Noah says that two sorts of animals left the ark, which had not entered it—the pig and the cat. Concerning the latter we have this interesting piece of information: When the rats began to make trouble the voyagers complained to Noah. Whereupon the patriarch "passed his hand down the back of the ark, who sneezed, and the cat leaped out of its nose. And the cat ate the rats."

According to the Talmud, Noah and his family and one pair of each kind of beast were to be saved in the ark, but of every clean beast seven were to enter in. The rhinoceros, however, had to be left out, for the simple but sufficient reason that its neck alone was three miles long. Nevertheless all the rhinoceroses survived the flood; hence it is reasonable to suppose that the huge beast was taken in tow by a rope attached to its horn. Some authorities hold that Noah extended his hospitality to the ark, and that he lived on the roof of the ark and received his daily food through a hole bored in the side of the vessel.

Ararat has been known under this name for 3,000 years, and an Armenian writer declares that an entire country was named after him. The ark, an ancient Armenian king, who lived about 1750 B. C. He fell in a bloody battle with the Babylonians, and the scene of his death was thenceforth known as Ararat, or the Fall of Arat. Josephus refers to the mountain as Niznania and declares that the remains of the ark were there to be seen carefully preserved.

Almost all the Asiatic traditions closely resemble the Biblical account. Berosus in his Chaldean history (B. C. 200) speaks of ten kings, who appear to correspond to the ten patriarchs in Genesis before the flood. The last of these kings was called Xisuthrus. Berosus relates that "Kronos appeared to Xisuthrus in a dream and warned him that all men would be destroyed by a deluge on the 15th of the month Daire and commanded him to write down all the learning and science of men and to hide it in the sun city Siparis and then to build a ship and enter it along with his family and relatives and nearest friends and to take into it with him food and drink and the beasts and winged fowl. When he was asked whether he was about to sail, he was bidden to reply, 'To the gods to pray them that men may prosper.' Xisuthrus did as he was commanded, and when the flood showed signs of abating he sent out three birds in succession. The first and second came back, the latter with mud on its feet, but the third returned alone. Soon after this the ship was stranded on a mountain, and Xisuthrus disembarked with his family, offered thanks to the gods and vanished. Subsequently the remaining survivors heard his voice in the heavens, bidding them fear God and to take his writings out of Siparis and from there instruct men."

Shocking Precocity.

"What is the result," asked the teacher of the primary class in arithmetic, "when you put two and two together?" "A kith," lisped the curly headed little girl in the front row—Chicago Tribune.

There are many diversities of vice, but it is one never failing effect of it to live displaced and discontented.—Seneca.

Quant Customs in Abyssinia.

Quant customs prevail in parts of Abyssinia. When a father is getting on in years, the son bids him climb into a tree and jump down from the branches. If the old man staggers on landing the son seizes him on the spot—his usefulness is over. One tribe had a custom of sewing chance visitors up in green hides and leaving them to be killed by the contraction of the skins. With another the only orthodox way of dealing with strangers was to tie them in a bundle and roll them over a precipice.—London Mail.

CULTIVATING THE CHILD. VICTORIA FALLS. THE PHILOSOPHY OF LOVE.

How Any Trait May Be Fixed in a Normal Human Being.

The Zambesi river, carrying a huge volume of water two miles in width, as it reaches the western borders of Rhodesia precipitates itself into a cavernous gorge and thus traverses the northern plains of the country.

This great drop in the river has produced "the most beautiful gem of the earth's scenery," the Victoria falls. Almost twice as broad as Niagara and two and a half times as high, an immense mass of water rolls over its edge to precipitate itself in magnificent splendor 400 sheer feet into the narrow canyon below.

Undeterred, the Rhodesian engineers, without detracting from the natural beauty of the surroundings, threw across the canyon a splendid 550 foot cantilever bridge and thus opened the way to Tanganyika, to Uganda, to Cairo.

This bridge, the greatest railway engineering triumph of Africa, deserves more than passing notice. It consists of a central span weighing approximately 1,000 tons, 500 feet in length and 30 feet wide. The steel work of the rolled steel weighing 400 pounds to the cubic foot. The end posts of the bridge are over 100 feet long. The pull on the anchorage apparatus is about 400 tons.

The contract for the construction was obtained by an English firm of bridge builders; the contract time fifty-five weeks. The work of erection was carried on from both banks, the material being taken across the river by means of an aerial electric railway. The electrical conveyor of this cable way was capable of dealing with a ten ton load at a lifting speed of twenty feet per minute and a traversing speed of 300 feet a minute.

An initial difficulty in the construction of the bridge was the securing of a firm foundation, and owing to the crumbling nature of the bank a much greater quantity of concrete was necessary than estimated.

The construction was happily untroubled by accidents of a serious nature, though a few slight accidents to body work and the replacing from England of one piece of steel work were recorded. In spite of these delays the bridge was linked up at 7 a. m. on April 1, 1905, or exactly forty-eight hours earlier than had been estimated a year before—Lieutenant Colonel Sir Percy Girouard in Scotland.

Cured Him.

"I wish my husband would not stay out at night," said the little woman. "Cure him," said her companion, "as a woman I know cured her husband, who used to stay out every night. One night he came in very late, and rather very early about 3 o'clock in the morning. He came home very quietly. In fact, he took off his shoes on the front doorstep. Then he unlocked the door and went cautiously and slowly up stairs on tiptoe, holding his breath. Ten light was streaming through the keyhole of a door, and he saw a woman with a sigh, he paused. Then he opened the door and entered. His wife stood by the bureau fully dressed. "I didn't expect you'd be sitting up for me, my dear," he said. "I just came in myself."

Presence of Mind.

Mme. Rachel, the great actress, was resting alone in her dressing room one night preparatory to going on the stage when a man suddenly entered and, drawing a dagger, said he was going to kill her if she did not at once consent to marry him. The actress saw at a glance that the man was mad and meant what he said. So with the utmost coolness she replied: "Certainly I will marry you. I wish nothing better. Come with me to the priest at once. I have had him come here for the purpose." She took his arm, and they went out together—to where there was assistance, of course, and the man was immediately put under arrest.—Philadelphia Record.

QUICKER THAN LIGHTNING.

Action of the Human Body Outstrips Everything in Motion.

"As quick as lightning" is a phrase colloquially used to express the maximum of rapidity, but, according to a well known scientific, electricity itself is outstripped by the old-fashioned machine, the human body, by which it appears powers can, so to speak, be generated in the brain, transmitted through the nerves and developed in the muscles in an infinitesimal fraction of a second.

It is said that a pianist in playing a presto of Mendelssohn played 5,505 notes in four minutes and three seconds. The striking of each of these, it has been estimated, involved two movements of the finger and possibly more.

Again, the movements of the wrist, elbow and arm can scarcely be less than one movement for each note. As twenty-four notes were played each second and each involves three movements we would have seventy-two voluntary movements per second.

Again, the place, the force, the time and the duration of each of these movements were controlled. All these motor reactions were conditioned upon a knowledge of the position of each finger of each hand before it was moved, while moving it, as well as of the auditory effect to force and pitch, all of which involves equally rapid sensory transmissions.

If we add to this the work of the memory in placing the notes in their proper position as well as the fact that the performer at the same time participates in the emotion the selection describes and feels the strength and weakness of the performance, we arrive at a truly bewildering network of impulses coursing along at inconceivable rapid rates.

Such estimates show, too, that we are capable of doing many things at once. The mind is not a unit, but is composed of higher and lower centers, the available fund of attention being distributed among them.—Pearson's Weekly.

Legend and Reality.

Legend tells us that Napoleon, while Moscow was in flames, found time to draw up a decree organizing the three Francs. Alas, the story is not true. Napoleon was in Poland when he received the decree ready to be signed. He there signed it and sent it back to Paris, but in the margin wrote the following: "To be forwarded when the army will be in Moscow. It is his majesty's intention that the decree should be dated from that town."

Obedience.

Every duty, even the least duty, involves the whole principle of obedience. And little duties make the will dutiful that is, supple and prompt to obey. Little obediences lead into great. The daily round of duty is full of probation and of discipline. It trains the will, heart and conscience.—Woman's Life.
